

Bhairab, I read everything properly, I sat there honestly I almost sat for a long time, before I even start writing this. This time, I don't want to immediately start with "Please don't leave me" or try to convince you of an outcome. I want to actually tell you what I understood from you.... And Bhairab, I understand your hurt. I understand why the thing with Prayashi wasn't just about that one incident for you. It became a connected to trust, vulnerability, my reactions, my fears, the way I sometimes handle things, and the way my actions have made you feel like you have to be careful ~~about~~ around me.

I am genuinely sorry, I don't want to defend myself from the things you felt. I want to understand them.

I understand that when you gave me something so vulnerable you trusted me to keep it safe. I broke that trust by telling her. That was wrong, yes I understand that would make you feel exposed and betrayed. And then when you asked me directly, I told you I hadn't told her. That hurts even more :c I'm so sorry baby... I know from your side you asked me for the truth and I gave an answer that wasn't true. I understand why that made you question whether you could trust me. And.... I am genuinely deeply sorry for that. I know that saying "It didn't mean to" doesn't undo what happened. It doesn't make what I did less hurtful, and it doesn't magically give you your trust back. I wish... I so much wish I could take that moment back. I wish I had understood the weight of what you trusted me with before I ever told anyone. And I am especially sorry for the part that happened after you asked me... I want one thing.. one thing I desperately need you to understand, not because I want to escape responsibility, but because as odd as this whole situation is, I don't want you to carry a version of what happened that isn't true. When you asked me whether I had ever told Prayashi about your vulnerable thing, I genuinely did not remember that I had. I really wasn't there knowing that I had told her and choose to lie straight to you. I actually believed I had never told her. That was what I remembered, I didn't check our conversation before answering you, that was careless of me... I should have checked before I answered with such certainty... today when I found out that I actually had told her, I understood exactly how it must have looked from your side. It will look like "she knew she did it and still lied to me"... And yes I 100% agree why that would hurt so much... But listen I genuinely forgot. And I know and I understand, from your perspective, the outcome is almost indistinguishable from an intentional lie. I am not going to ask you to ignore that. I am not going to ~~so~~ tell you that you shouldn't feel betrayed, I am not going to say that because I forgot, I did nothing wrong... I did. I was wrong for telling her in the first place.. I was wrong for not checking before answering you. And I am responsible for the damage that came from both of these things. But I need you to know that there was no one moment where I consciously thought, "I know I told her, but I'm going to deny it so to protect myself"... There wasn't. If I had remembered doing it, I would have faced what I did. I wouldn't hide a conversation or erase anything. The fact that I didn't even remember that conversation existed is exactly why I answered the way I did.

This doesn't make the situation any okay...but I swear to you, if I had remembered telling her when you asked me, I would not have told

classmate

Date _____

Page _____

you that I never did. I wish more than anything that I had checked before answering you.... Bhairab I can accept you being angry with me, I can accept you being hurt. I can accept that you don't trust me right now. What I can't accept is letting you believe that I knowingly chose to lie to you when that isn't what happened. I was wrong Bhairab but I wasn't deliberately dishonest about remembering it. I am sorry that my mistake made it look like I knowingly deceived you :c I didn't Bhairab but I do own up to it. I know Bhairab, the more I read your letters, this was not only one thing.. everything underneath you were already hurting. You felt that I questioned you, that I inspect your actions, ~~some~~ how sometimes I treated things you did as evidence against you instead of seeing the intention behind me.

Bhairab... it pains me to know that maybe from a long time you were not simply just hurt by one particular thing but you were becoming exhausted from feeling like you had to constantly prove that your intentions were good, that you were not doing something wrong, that you were not someone I needed to be suspicious about. Ofcourse you didn't baby...

It guilts me to say how I let my relationship anxiety absolutely come between us and destroy things up bit. And I am really sorry for making you feel such ways Bhairab. I understand how some things are so unfair... yes, I agree... I don't want your Instagram, your whatsapp conversations, your friendships, your words, your actions, the people around you or some tiny thing... to become something that you need to defend yourself up against. It hurts so much... knowing how much my actions sometimes made you feel like a criminal... Bhairab you are not a criminal. I know I cannot simply just say that 'I trust you now' and expect all that feeling to disappear.

I have to learn to actually define how that I trust you. Also, I want to mention one thing... I don't want your kindness to become something you are scared to show whether I'll interpret it badly. I want us to be able to understand that someone else's presence does not automatically reduce what we mean to each other. I do agree, I have projected my insecurity before you many times, things which sometimes are stupid enough yes... and I want you to absolutely correct ^{me} and tell me and not actually fear from it... I would like to take accountability as well that yes I understand what you told me rn, I am sorry... I let my insecurity creep out suddenly and misinterpreted things a bit... Oh and yes the little things... the crochet we wanted to do together, I absolutely do want to do it... I actually want to do so many things with you  everytime I imagine us actually doing so many cute activities and things together... like I keep romanticising it... my fear which creeps up here is our lack of time we get... I want to sit comfortably with you and laugh and sing and make crochet, or paint, or just randomly watch a movie... just recently like two-three days ago... I was constantly thinking about a Tuesday and we go ~~to~~ over to your house and we watch a movie together. I want to watch the movie "The Perks of being a Wallflower" -- it's a very cozy movie and I so want to just cuddle you and watch a movie together... bhaiyaab I know I bring things up on my own but after many times when we try to do the crochet... there was always something.. and even tho, it did make me feel bad too... ahh... I don't want to keep giving hopes and we don't even get time to do it... I ahh yes keep subconsciously waiting for such a long hour to come up for us to do things... but you know every moment I have ever spent with you, I have enjoyed everyone of it. You wrote about the time when you were doing something like explaining me the chess yes... you genuinely wanted to share it with me, but my reaction made you feel like I was forced to endure it... I am sorry bhaiya... coz no, I absolutely didn't feel forced but during that chess time I wanted to yap so much with you $\bar{m}$... I am not absolutely trying to dismiss these things, the feelings, how you felt... at all, it does carry significant parts right even tho... I am saying you... I am not one bit bored if we ever genuinely do all these together.. ahh I have to be honest about one thing tho... I do get distracted bich mein.. like my ADHD kick right in $\bar{i}$... Ayaa...

Okay.. about the boundaries... I read those pages more than once because I think this is one of the places I specially need to be honest with myself. Everything you told me about yes... the sticker, the touching, the sexual jokes, the comments, things involving other people, things that you felt harmless because of the intention behind them, while I sometimes reacted as though actions ~~were~~ $\bar{p}$ prove something. You mentioned a question 'Why should the meaning of action change depending on who is doing it?' Yes... true bhaiya. If something is a boundary, it should be a boundary. Because we have agreed it matters to us, not because one of us happens to be standing on the other side of it right. You also said that either we trust each other's intentions and allow each other reasonable freedom, or we agree on boundaries that apply mutually and equally.. Yes, I totally agree here.. I don't want us to have rules that change... depending on whose doing something. If something genuinely make me uncomfortable, I should be able to tell you honestly, but I also need to be willing to understand and hear when something I do makes you uncomfortable. And neither of us should have to keep a mental list of exceptions for ourselves. I want us to actually talk about what our boundaries are. Together... I am so sorry about my immaturity ways and double standards that felt at times. I want us to actually talk about this and clear things out, where this thin line of boundary for both of us starts and ends... ~~Yes~~ And the men hating thing... I agree with what you shared with me... I was blinded by this Instagram's feed algorithm and how it can actually affect me as well sometimes... but Yes, what you felt and ~~agreed~~ ~~on~~ ~~doesn't~~ told me about are true as well. Yes I do understand why it hurts when you felt that your empathy for other 'men'... the genuinely good ones... it got reduced to being "triggered" or when you felt that I was defending myself instead of listening to what you were actually trying to tell me... I am sorry Bhairab. I need to understand that yes I can disagree with something you say and still understand why it matters... when you yourself always agreed to what was right... and I don't want our disagreement to become a battle of ~~pr~~ perspective whose is more valid and all... maybe it was in fact me who got triggered.

Bhairab, you mentioned one thing... whether you were genuinely loved or whether you were slowly being shaped into the version of a man who caused me the least anxiety...

This one hurts to read... but I understand why you would question it after everything... I don't want you to think I chose you because I want to turn you into someone else. I chose you... But I understand that my my fear sometimes made me response to you as though you needed to become different for me to feel safe... That is something I have to own... I don't want to love you only when you behave in the exact way that make my anxiety quit... even tho not for once my love for you ever dropped... regardless of everything my anxiety and fear feeded my head... and ofcourse that is not fair to you love... I want to learn how to love the actual person in front of me, including the parts of you that you believe are imperfect, inconvenient, clumsy, stubborn, silly, emotional or simply different ~~than~~ from me. You told me very clearly today that you don't want me to think you're perfect... and yes. I understand.. I don't honestly expect you or even need to play the perfect bf for me... I want us to be two real people instead. I also realised something about effort... You wrote that love isn't only what someone feels inside. It's also how someone treats the person they love... I agree to it... And I understand why you said that... because you can love someone deeply and still fail to make them feel loved through your actions... And I think there were times when I expected you to understand the love behind my intentions while I wasn't paying enough attention to whether my actions were actually reaching you in the way I thought or assumed they were... I am sorry... well... I don't want to use 'but I love you' as a replacement for actually loving you in ways you can feel. I want to learn how you receive love, I want to learn what makes you feel cared for... I want to understand of the small things that matter to you... well not because I want to "perform" some role perfectly... but because you matter to me ♥♥♥

Also, this is something... I am ~~so~~ very much ashamed about the absolutely disgusting and also non-tolerable joke I made about "eri dim".... This would be far from feeling harmless when it comes from someone you love right... And I made this huge dumbass mistake of saying something like that... I absolutely didn't mean it bhaiwab... I never would... leaving will always be the last thing for me honestly... I own up every part of it... every part of how I casually said something like that. I am sorry for making our relationship itself become part of that fear. You shouldn't have to spend days wondering whether something I say about leaving is serious or whether it's a joke. You shouldn't have to live with that uncertainty because of something I said... I take responsibility and accountability for it... how it made you feel that I could break a promise so casually... I am ashamed even more about it, this is something I will not accept as my behaviour either, making the relationship itself feel threatened :C ☹️... Bhaiwab, you told me how you felt when you said something went wrong, I would collapse into blaming myself and call myself terrible... I explained in AEC yes... but when you bring a problem I try to take accountability as well bhaiwab... Yes... I understand the difference... feeling horrible for what I did doesn't repair what happened... I understand now self-punishment was never accountability and I understand that absolutely but I do take every bit of accountability if you bring something up... sometimes in joy or sometimes I might not see the gravity of some situations and moments... and one thing I didn't realise is that I could bring something up and be able to say sorry about it... holding accountability... instead of trying to make things forget. And also the last bit of thing I want is you ending up having to take care of my emotions... I always believed... I was taking accountability though, maybe there is a better way to learn the ability to apologize... and I always would want a healthy communication... well in some ways we could try atleast and learn from whenever we lack in some parts... You mentioned about my fears... I understand those more clearly now that you mentioned it up and when we were actually living through all of it... I have a lot of fears and that definitely manifests into a lot of things in my daily life. I try to control the outcome before the outcome has even happened - I can't deny it anymore... I have done that... but now I also can reflect on what THAT does.. My fear doesn't stay inside my head, it comes into my actions, my questions, my reacts, it comes the way I interpret you... and eventually it comes into the relationship. I don't want that Bhairab :c And where you said, fear can turn people into ~~to~~ threats. before they have even done anything... this is really needed to realise for myself cause it absolutely can fake up a lot of things... to fake... possibilities and everything scary things.. and behaving according to that "possibility" rather than the "reality". I want to learn to ask, to listen, to respond, I want to trust myself enough to know: whatever happens, I can face it... Choosing myself enough to stop being controlled by fear... this could actually help us, not take me away from you... I becoming secure enough to tolerate uncertainty, secure enough to hear difficult things, secure enough to accept mistakes, to be secure enough to forgive, secure enough to accept that I can be misunderstood without falling apart. And I don't want perfection from either of us... I want honesty, effort, patience, accountability and willingness to keep learning each other.

classmate

Date _____

Page _____

Also, I want to say something here m... about actions. Yes, you can think right now that I can say all these things, I can apologise, I can cry... I can tell you that I understand, these aren't false but I don't want to ask you to believe me immediately here. I want to earn that trust through what I do... If I feel ~~afasa~~ afraid... I want to communicate it instead of letting fear decide upon my behaviour. If I am unsure about something, I want to ask instead of assuming. If you tell me something hurts, you, I want to listen before defending ~~my~~ myself. If I disagree with you, I want to be able to disagree without making you feel attacked, If you disagree with me, I want to be able to hear that too... If something happens that I don't like, I want to talk about it instead of collecting evidences. And If I make a mistake, I want to correct the behaviour rather than only apologize for it. I know these are things... you can only believe after seeing them and I am okay with that.

Bhairab ... you asked me whether I would be able to come back into this relationship without walking on eggshells... I don't want any of us walking on eggshells. I don't want you to be ~~to~~ scared to tell me when something hurts you because you think I'll immediately say something like "unexpected" or blaming myself too much. And I don't want to be scared to tell you when something hurts me because I think it might mean we're falling apart.

I want us to be able to ~~have~~ have difficult conversations. I want us to be able to fight... not cruelly... not by trying to destroy the other person... not by threatening each other - I want us to be able to say: I am angry, that hurts me, I don't agree, I need you to understand this, I need some time, etc. - and still know that a difficult conversation is not automatically the death of the relationship. you said that sometimes maybe it is necessary that we fight, because pretending that a relationship is perfect only makes people suppress things I can understand that... And you asked me to promise myself today, because I know if only I change because I'm scared you'll leave me, then the moment the fear disappears, I'll eventually go back to the same patterns. I want to change because I don't like the way fear has controlled me. I want to be able to live without constantly trying to prevent every possible bad outcome. I want to be able to trust myself, I want to be ~~able~~ able to let uncertainty ~~exist~~ exist without turning it into a catastrophe. I want to be able to love someone without constantly trying to control what happens next. And I want to become that person as much as for myself and for us ♥. I want to face mistakes honestly, learn from them and stop hiding behind. You see... Growth doesn't have to mean becoming someone else, rather it's an evolution to becoming a healthier version of myself & I want that... I don't believe that two people having difficulties automatically means they have to stop loving each other. Difficulty does not automatically equal incompatibility. Sometimes two people will hurt each other, misunderstand each other, sometimes one also realises things whether good or bad about themselves through such discomforts. Sometimes trust gets damaged and has to be rebuilt slowly... I believe sometimes two people reach a point where they have to become much more honest than they were before. They have to stop pretending, stop suppressing, stop controlling, stop assuming, learning how to communicate differently... and yes, that is hard. I know it will be hard -- hard doesn't scare me away from us tho... I don't want to leave something meaningful simply because fixing it requires uncomfortable work. I want to put on the work... Oh yes... I want to become better at loving you too ♡. I am not saying this to become someone who is constantly performing just to keep you... neither should you. I want to become a person who is healthy enough to be your partner. You taught me something important today... and I know you said actions are what will prove it... So I won't ask you to believe me tonight, I won't ask you to forget everything. I won't ask you to trust me suddenly, I won't ask you to pretend the hurt wasn't real. I will let my actions speak over time... I want show you ♡. And I know that showing you doesn't mean doing ten ~~big~~ huge things for a few days and it actually means the small things changing consistently. It means you eventually noticing that I don't react the same way anymore... That I ask instead of assuming, I speak instead of hiding, I listen instead of defending, that I don't use fear to control situations. That I don't make you responsible ~~to~~ for regulating every emotion I have, that I don't turn every disagreement into double standards or into a threat to what we have. That I can let you be yourself and That I can be myself too.

Also one thing I really want to say about us is that I don't want us to become two people who are constantly scared of hurting each other.

I want us to become two people who know that even if we hurt each other, we can talk it out. We can repair, we can apologise, we can learn, we can do better, I want us to be able to have difficult # days without immediately questioning everything good. I want us to be able to disagree without one person becoming villain. I want us to be able to say the uncomfortable things and truths before it becomes resentment. And I want both of us to have the freedom to choose ourselves while still choosing each other ♡♡

Bhairab, I don't want to lose YOU... and by you I mean You... I am not saying this to control the outcome or something... I am saying it because it's True. I love you ♡ and I want us ♡ I want us to choose each other because, after everything we've understood about ourselves, we still believe that we can make this healthier. Nothing is born "healthier" ... but it can be "made" one by work... So yes, Bhairab I understand that this cannot just be another message from me saying "sorry, I'll change". I understand that there have been many words already. I don't want this message to be another performance. I want it and to be the point where I actually understand what you're asking from me. You aren't asking me to be perfect and neither am I, ~~you~~ you aren't asking me to never make another mistake and so am I, you aren't asking me to stop having emotions and so am I, you aren't asking me to never fight with you and so am I. You are asking me to trust myself enough that fear doesn't control what I do. You're asking me to trust you enough that I don't turn every uncertainty into suspicion. You are asking me to let you be a person instead of constantly evaluating you, you're asking me to understand your feelings before I try to fix the outcome. You're asking me to make my actions match my words... and also you're asking me to choose and love myself enough that I don't turn into the dark side of my mind either. And I genuinely want to learn everything... all of that. And I want to work on this with you... Not because I think love automatically fixes everything. Not because I think what happened doesn't matter. Not because I want to erase your hurt, Not because I'm scared to be alone but because I LOVE YOU, and because I believe what we have deserves an HONEST Attempt at becoming and turning from our bad habits and toxic habits to a healthier one.

I am willing to do the uncomfortable things
I am willing to have the difficult conversations
I am willing to hear things about myself that hurt
keep my immaturity aside
I am willing to be corrected
I am willing to change habits
I am willing to let you have your own feelings without immediately trying to control them.
I am willing to let myself have feelings without letting 'them' control me either.
I want to learn, to grow, to work and if you are willing too, for us, to slowly build something where neither of us has to walk on eggshells.
where you don't have to perform being okay for me where I don't have to perform being perfect Where we both can be imperfect human beings and still feel loved where mistakes are faced instead of hidden

Where hurt is spoken instead of bottled
Where boundaries are mutual

Where trust is earned and protected

Where love isn't measured by how perfectly we avoid hurting each other, but by how honestly we handle it what we do

And Bhaiyaab --- I still want you... to choose you... this time I want to choose you without losing myself and I want you to choose yourself without losing yourself
And I want us to choose each other because we both genuinely believe that ^{we} can do better.

I love you ♥

I am deeply sorry for the ways I hurt you :c

And I don't expect one message of mine to repair everything. Let me show you.. Not today.. Not through promises.. through time.. through little things.. through the uncomfortable convos ... through the way I act when afraid
... through the way I respond when hurt (both).. through the way I treat your trust from now on... I am not pretending nothing happened, not by rushing your pain not by being afraid of every difficult convo.. but by facing it together.. because people matter more than the mistakes when both people are genuinely willing to learn and I am willing to learn

And yes if we need difficult convos, let's have them

If there are ~~st~~ things. you still need to tell me, tell me

If there are things you need to ask me, ask me

If there are things I ~~we~~ need to understand about myself more, I want to reflect that

If there are things we both need to change, let's change together ♥ If I missed anything let me know funfun. ♥